Mastery Families,

As you may know, today the governors of Pennsylvania and New Jersey announced significant state-wide closure of schools and places of business. At Mastery, we want to ensure your child is safe and recognize that we need to prepare to support your child's learning during this crisis – as it may be a long one. We know that this is a very stressful time for your family and that transitioning to learning at home can be challenging. On Wednesday, we will begin sharing resources with you.

To get started, we ask that all students set aside time every day to read. We suggest you talk with your child and establish a regular and consistent “school time” each day for them to read and do school work. If you do not have broadband internet service, good news -- Comcast's is giving 2 months free service to new Internet Essentials customers in response to crisis – please Click here for more details.

Until we settle into a new normal routine, I will be communicating daily updates and suggestions for ways you can support quality learning at home. We want you to know that Mastery is here and ready to partner with you.
